

Native American Tribes: Nez Perce

Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce 1840-1904

The Nez Perce tribe is from the Pacific Northwest area of Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho. Today there are about 2,700 members, most of whom live in Idaho.

In 1805, William Clark of the Lewis and Clark Expedition met with the Nez Perce. At that time, the tribe was the largest in the area, with about 6,000 members.

The Nes Perce moved from place to place depending on the season of the year. They would move to find the best food. Sometimes they would go east to the Great Plains in Montana to hunt buffalo or west to the Columbia River to fish for salmon. In winter, the Nez Perce would have winter camps which they would return to every year.

When traveling, the Nez Perce would use tipis, or tents made from hides. The tipis could be moved easily from place to place.

The Nez Perce were known for their riding ability and fast horses. They also are skillful fishermen.
